THE TREATY RATIFICATION,

IT WAS by the decisive vote of 72 to 6 that the Senate ratified the Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty which makes the United States the sole sponsor for the construction and maintainance of a waterway connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific. While the main result was anticipated, the practical unani mity of the Senate was as unexpected as it was gratifying to the friends of the measure.

That the present form of the treaty is more ac ceptable to American sentiment than was the amended one which Great Britain rejected, is man icest by the fact that the vote by which the latter was ratified was 55 to 18. Of the six senators who voted nay on the last occasion, Bacon and Mallory voted with the majority last December. Culberson, Teller and Tillman voted both times in the negative and Blackburn was not a member of the Senate at that time The reason given by Bacon and Mallory for voting against ratification was that they feared that the treaty does not give the United States power to close the canal against an enemy in time of

The chief advantage to the United States in this treaty over the other is that it supercedes the Clayton-Bulwer convention and gives to us a free hand in arranging for the construction, maintenance and control of a canal whose neutralization

As to the objection of Bacon and Mallory, the Salt Lake Herald, in our opinion, sizes up the matter correctly in saying. "The agreement is not as specific in some points as it might be, perhaps as it should have been. There is no definite clause which will permit the United States to fortify the canal, but nothing in the treaty can be construed as prohibiting it. If we want to fortify it we can do so without injecting a jarring note in the concert of powers. Another feature of the treaty which may or may not be carried out to the letter is that which guarantees an open canal in times of peace or war.

It is manifestly unreasonable to expect the United States to build the canal and then keep it open for the warships of an enemy, in order that they might more easily lay waste our unprotected western coast line. In the event of hostilities with England or Germany, the great naval powers of the world, this clause would doubtless be susceptable of a more elastic construction than the text implies.

عور على عاب عان عار REMOVE THE TEMPTATION.

SPEAKER HENDERSON after his nomination by the Republican caucus addressed his associates on the danger of the surplus in the treasury, saying: "Every Republican will be upon his metal We will expect the same from the opposition. There is always more activity at every Congress preceding a congressional election than at any other time, which will require all the wifdom we posess and all the patriotism, for we have a great danger confronting us continually, and that is the surplus in the treasury. I appeal to my colleagues, Republicans, to keep in mind that this is a danger, and if we can be wise in the presence of that danger we will find approval from the American people. The American people do not expect any niggardliness in the treatment of the matters that they require. I do counsel that, but I counsel the conservative consideration of every question which should be observed at all times without reference to the $100,000,000 that we are soon to have "

The best way to free men from temptation is to remove the temptation. The surplus is piling up in the treasury at an unprecedented rate. So long as this continues, it will be a constant temptation to the Republican Congress to be extravagant. By cutting down or abolishing the war taxes, and reducing the tariff duties, the receipts may be made to conform to the necessary expenditures A Republican Congress is prone to be extravagant. The secretary of the treasury reports estimates calling for larger appropriations for running the government. There are a dozen members who had schemes that would use all of 'he surplus and then require more money. Due regard for safety, economy and justice counsel a reduction of the revenues. Speaker Henderson should have been brave enough to suggest the most thorough remedy يەر يەن يەن تەن تەن

POINTED POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS. (From the Commoner

'The tariff must be revised by its friends!" shouts an administration organ. It will be a sorry day for the tariff beneficiaries when it is revised by its victims.

Referring to the Philippine decision of the Supreme court the Chicago Record-Herald speaks of "the acrobatic Justice Brown." Anarchy, to say nothing of treason!

It costs the government eight times more to carry the mails than it costs the express companies to have their matter hauled. Postmaster General Smith should animadvert on this fact.

A reader of the Commoner asks for the correct pronunciation of the President's name The inquiry was referred to the President's private secretary, who replies that Mr. Roosevelt's name is "pronounced in three syllables, with the two o's as ne,"—Roos-e-velt.

The Chicago Tribune asserts that talking about the money question is "appealing to sentiment and prejudice." There are times when the Chicago Tribune forcibly reminds one of Artemus Ward's kangaroo

President Roosevelt bespeaks commendation for the "captains of industry." This would be all right if it were not for the fact that the "captains" sometime forget to have compassion for the privates.

The San Francisco Call is shocked to find an anti-monarchical sentiment among the miners in the Yukon territory, but this is not surprising for the Call is one of the papers that is grieved to find an anti-imperialistic sentiment in the United States.

THE Carson News says, "protection is a defensive and not an offensive policy." That depends upon how it is applied. When it enables a domestic trust to sell at a profit its products in a foreign country for less than it charges home consumers, it can hardly be regarded as defensive of the pockets and purses of those who pay the premium.

THERE is to be another whisky trust, but there is no danger that the beverage will be placed beyoud the reach of the masses.
